In this technologically advanced era, brand promotional strategies and advertising techniques have changed radically because of digital platform. To cope with the changes with consumers view and perceive things copywriting plays vital role. The report has been integrated with a lot of information that shows the significance of copywriting in advertising industry.

The most important step lies in deciding what an advertisement should say and to whom it should say it. All it needs to position the brand picture in consumers mind through the communication process. As a copywriter I tried to focus on this specific area.

PART 2

Introduction of the report

I am Imrul kayes Sabbir from BBA department and my bearing student ID is 15104206 and I have done my Major in marketing and mainly that is why I took this report which is Impact of Copywriting in Marketing Communication so that I can utilize and capitalize my knowledge on my internship report which is related to my course. Basically this is the main reason that I was so interested to undertake this report.

Basically as a student this topic is very much relevant to me because like as i said that I did my major in marketing and I was very fortunate that I got the chance to do my internship in an advertising agency. And in terms of my future career this topic will definitely help me a lot even expand my knowledge about marketing and how Advertising is important for any company.

Today's viable world leaves no space for people who fall behind. It is a very competitive era. In this circumstances corporate houses and consumer companies have started a new era of Creative function of selling their product and advertisement has emerged in the depiction. Advertising is a media of communication which has gone through many evolutionary periods to reach its present state. Advertisement today is no longer just a marketing tool it is an expression Showing various view points of many companies and their products. Advertisement is a blend of many creative works combined to reflect a single thought. Advertisement includes visualizing, sound effects, and copy writing. In an advertisement copy is the most established impression on its viewers. The meaning of an ad changes during the course of time. In this report I will incorporate the things I have learned during my internship as a copywriter, and discuss different advertising copywriting and thus how influential and important the copy is for different ads.
Objectives:

I aim to accomplish from this report is how important copywriting is for every single companies including multinational companies to small companies. Fundamentally after doing my internship at Adon for 3 months and after choosing and writing this topic I truly came to know and understood the importance of copywriting and advertisement in any company. After working at adon and writing my report on “Impact of Copywriting in Marketing Communication” it made me understand and made it clear to me that copywriting is the key to stand the brand out there.

The history and evolution of copywriting:

Advertising copywriting has existed since Babylonian times and the first printed material is said to have come into the world in 1477, promoting the sale of a prayer book.

The history of copywriting dates back to when the first printed papers were distributed on the street. The actual word “copywriting” means the act of writing words to sell products. The copywriter is the person who does this, often found in ad agencies or at home as a freelancer.

The job of a copywriter began by creating ads on a large poster made of paper with a feather dipped ink (how deliciously antiquated and time consuming). These posters were fixed to walls and poles in the bigger cities of Europe. Centuries ago there were no printing processes to make duplicates, so each page was painstakingly handcrafted. Creating such ads was more of an art and it sounds incredibly meditative to me.

Eventually, they evolved to printed pamphlets and brochures and became much smaller in size as printing in its new evolution was a complicated and lengthy process, so the smaller the item, the faster it was.

Once mass printing processes were perfected, around 1605, newspapers could be mass produced and hawked on street corners. The first English paper was produced in 1664, called the Oxford Gazette (now known as the London Gazette). It was when the larger format newspapers were published that advertisements began to appear on one full page or several ads were dispersed throughout the pages. What a glorious time that must have been for copywriters as there wasn’t quite the saturated market, you could have more effect on people and their purchasing or social decisions.

It has been suggested that the first person to work as an official independent copywriter was John Emory Powers. He lived from 1837 to 1919 and was the first person to have this job fulltime and instead of working for a newspaper, he worked for the popular department stores of Lord & Taylor and Wanamaker’s. These stores recognized the importance of creating excellent ads that would stand out in newspapers and magazines. He created six ads a week. I’d like that kind of work load.

He is deemed the ‘father of modern creative advertising’ by creating one of the most controversial ads of the era, in his signature straight talking style, that ended up selling out stock in a number of hours. Truth telling was his gimmick and it seemed to work!

Copywriting today:

Today’s modern copywriter does more than simply write copy for newspaper or magazine ads. With ecommerce growing at a rate of at least seventeen per cent per year and content marketing becoming a universal marketing tactic employed by ninety per cent of businesses worldwide, a copywriter now has to be proficient in writing for the web with a sound knowledge of SEO best practices. Copywriters may also write copy for book jackets, food and product packaging, name floral bouquets write about technology trends in healthcare (done this too), write meta data descriptions for sunglasses, write media releases about musicians and authors (uh huh…) and so it goes.

A worthy copywriter is also responsible for helping websites achieve good SEO rankings involving strategic placement of common keywords that consumers are likely to be searching for, in amongst web copy and content articles without making it seem awkward and unreadable and like it’s been written by a drunk robot.
Despite the medium and shelf life of copywriting changing, there are still some rock solid facets of copywriting that haven’t changed over its lifetime. They are:

The need for impeccable storytelling

Using emotional persuasion

Brevity

Uniqueness

Audience focused

Purpose of copywriting:

Copywriting provides a direct line of communication between existing and prospective Customers and product or service. The fundamental purpose of copywriting is:

• Make customers aware of product or service;

• Convince customers that company's product or service is right for their needs;

• Create a desire for the product or service;

• Enhance the image of the company;

• Launch new products or services;

• Reinforce salespeople's messages;

• Create the scope for the customers to take the next step (ask for more information, Request a sample, place an order, and so on)
Task of copywriter:

Blog posts: These can range from 200 to 1500 words. They're usually a bit more informal or opinionated, but it varies from client to client.

Stories: Stories tend to be 1,500-2,500 words and are informative, educational documents that explain the origins of a problem and how it might be solved. Often that solution will be linked to what the client sells, but the majority of the stories will be objective and useful.

Emails: Email campaigns are there to pique interest, raise awareness and prompt an action. They have to be short, enticing and informative.

Social media posts: Those little 140 character tweets and witty Facebook updates don't write themselves you know. Social media requires copywriting too.

Case studies: Short articles that explain how a company helped its customers. Case studies often have a formulaic structure but a good copywriter can find the story inside it.

Industry reports: Sometimes we have to get a bit heavy and write some hardcore reports based on real research that illuminates or expands upon a certain issue, industry or trend.

Website copy: Writing for the web comes with its own set of rules and guiding principles: it's a whole other skill set, but one many copywriters have up their sleeve.
Key role of copywriter:
- Research
- Interview
- Edit
- Proofread
- Manage projects
- Source images
- Plan and implement marketing campaigns

Copywriting plays a crucial role in promotion and advertisement of any business. No matter what business the companies are involved in, simply having a good product or service is not enough to sell the products. In fact, promotion and advertisement plays major role in getting sales for any business. Any good advertisement is incomplete without the right kind of slogan to go with it. If the advertisement does not have a good slogan then it is incomplete. On the other hand, an advertisement can look complete with only text and without any image. Good slogans are very crucial to attract the people to the product and service. Over the years, we have heard many a popular add lines that have become so popular that they have become a part of the daily conversation.

Copywriting for brand Picture:
In the advertising for a copywriter audience reaction is all. In general, copywriters want his/her audiences to feel something or want them to think, understand or to remember the products he/she is selling, and it is called brand-building". A copywriter gives the product a bit of personality, so that it shapes people's attitudes towards the product. The advertising copywriter always focuses on how people think, feel and act.
Structure of copywriting:
Advertisements are little commercials, which come to us at all hours of the day, seven days a week, thirty days a month and twelve months a year, but not all of them have an equal impact on the audience. Some can be very annoying, but then there are also those ads that stand out and make people think. For me and people in the advertising and copywriting field, that may happen a little more often, simply because we tend to pay more attention and analyze the content of the advertisements.

An advertisement is obviously an image, coupled with a message known as copy but sometimes it's just an image and at other times it can be just a copy. But more often than not, it's a combination. In this report I will be dealing with copywriting, which according to me is the most important part of advertisement.

Following are some of the things that a copywriter needs to keep in mind during writing copies:

Simplify the purpose of the Ad through Copy:
What will be the consumer’s first response after seeing the ad is the most significant part of copy writing. Whatever the response is, writers need to make sure they know those reactions before the customers' make them and then put the pen on paper. From my own experience and the way I have seen people around me work; I can say that, getting a clear view and go for it is the classic yet the most used technique of copy writing.

Attractive Headline:
The headline is crucial because a great headline can make a business shine overnight. The mission of a copy is to reach out to the consumer as they are paging through magazines, surfing the web or TV channels and somehow draw their attention. A copywriter needs to do a lot of brainstorming before deciding on the headline, which will help to flesh out the ad.

Write using conversational tone:
Copywriting is a one-way communication with the consumer either written or spoken. That is, the potential customer cannot ask questions of the ad. At least not at the beginning they cannot, but definitely in the future they may raise question for or against the ads. Good ad copy is persuasive prose that convinces the consumer to buy. Writer needs to bond with the potential customer to make them believe what he/she is delivering is for their benefit.

Creative:
How do copywriters make the ad really stand out? He/She must find a unique way of expressing an idea or concept in the ad. A new way of approaching an old product can really bring it to life.

Make Every Word Count:
This is where ad copywriting really becomes an art form. To make every word count means that to get rid of the fluff and keep the meaningful words. When this is done the ad takes on a whole new look and feel. But the real impact is made when it is read. An ad that keeps only the significant words is an ad that will read or sound very well.

Tiny and crunchy Sentences:
People are drawn to copy that is terse, hard-hitting and to the point. Using the present tense and the active voice make the ad precise and striking.

Write about Benefits of the Product:
People love to know what is in the ads for them; they want to see what benefits they can have that the company informing them through these ads. The goal is to express how the product or service will positively impact the customer's life. The features of the product or the details about the company are important but people are so conditioned to talk about features, that they often forget about the benefits that those features can bring to their lives.

Copywriting and Digital marketing:
Now a days digital platform such as Facebook, Youtube, blogs are very much effective medium for advertising. Around 20 million people of Bangladesh are using Facebook. Almost all of the brand runs Facebook page and runs online campaign to engage the audience and build a brand perception. In digital platform most of the visible works are dependent on copywriter and visualize. Thus it creates huge demands for copywriters.
Work process of Copywriter:

Brief:

As Creative thinking is very important in Adon Communication, the process is immensely practiced here. Whenever a new idea for AV or RDC (Radio Commercial) or any other kind of campaign is needed, our GM (Acting creative director) call on a meeting with account management and creative department and brief them about the product or service and then the department start thinking on it by following the process of creative thinking.

Preparation:

After getting the brief creative department seats together and discuss about the brief. They understand the tone of brand and dive into deep to the USP. Then it is mandatory to do a primary research about the brand, competitor, target audience, habits of consumer. Another important aspect of this process is to identify the psychological perception and cultural tension of targeted consumer.
Conceptualization:

After research generating ideas and visualizing them is the next step. The feasibility test is essential for the ideas and to check if those ideas are doable or not is also important. The final concept will be discussed with the creative director and he/she will approve it or further improvise it.

Visualization:

The final step of the process is visualization. It is the time to determine, how we will see the visual. It can be a Audio visual, radio commercial, graphical content, typography etc. The graphic designer will create graphical content and the script will be sent to director for Av production.

My role as a copywriter:

As a copywriter I was there to brainstorm and generate ideas for campaign for brands, writing pitch stories, writing captions for Facebook post, writing headline of graphical content, writing website copies, Rj endorsement script and so on.

After I joined as an intern copywriter I got the opportunity of writing call to action story for Mojo for valentine day campaign named “Antorer dak”. Two video was produced from my script.

Product: Mojo
Client: Akij group
Job: call to action video for facebook
Director: Russel Sikder
Background: Mojo wanted to run a online campaign for valentine day.
For this Av production I got to observe the shooting process of a television commercial.
In my internship period I wrote more than 50 stories for thematic campaign, Brand positioning, client pitching etc. Here are some of them:
শিবলী বলল, এই জাবেদ, ভাবছি স্টেডিয়াম টা কিনে নিব। জাবেদ, হাঁ বললেই হলো নাকি আমি বিক্রি করলে না কিনবি। শিবলী, কেন তুমি তোমার জানের জন্য ক্রিকেটের সাধনার কে নিয়ে খেলবা নাকি এখানে যে ১ বলে ১০ রান নিবে। জাবেদ একটু রেণে গিয়ে বলল, ১ বলে কেমনে ১০ রান হয়? কেন তোমার ব্যাটসম্যান এসন্ন জোড় শত খেলবে বল দুই তুকরা হয়ে এক তুকরা হবে হয়ে আরেক তুকরা হবে চার। [হিহিহি]। জাবেদ খুব সিরিয়াস হয়ে বললে দেখ ফাইনলামি করবি কর কিন্তু দেশ নিয়ে কিছু না। শিবলী বলল দেশ নিয়ে কখন কি বললাম। জাবেদ রাগি ভঙ্গিতে বললেও একি কথা। শিবলী বলল, এত সিরিয়াস। তুই ত আসলেই একটা বাঙালিরে। (আসলেই বাঙালি ভেনিফাইড সিল আসবে ছিনে)

I have also written the copies for Adon website.
Challenges:

It is very rare that a client is satisfied by the first draft that you present to them. They will come to you with a hundred changes in mind. Sometimes, even when they know that the work they received is of acceptable standards, they would simply just ask “Isn’t there a better word for this?”

The only way to handle this challenge is to be firm when dealing with the accepting party of the work. If there is room for improvement, the writer should make the effort to make it better. However, in an instance where there isn’t anything to be changed, the writer should communicate this fact to the client in the most polite yet convincing way possible.

Creativity and Technicality is a challenge faced by copywriters in the field of creating marketing content. Most clients want to include all the technical aspects of the products and services they offer in the content that is designed while making it extremely creative.

Meeting the deadline is another big challenge for copywriters. Writing isn’t a robotic operation. You can’t speed up the process just because a client wants it a day before the deadline. This fact is easily disregarded by most people.

A writer can only write at a certain speed. They don’t just have to look for information but also think of ways to present in a creative way. They also have to consider other aspects such as originality and reliability. Imposing difficult deadlines on writers will only reduce the quality of the work that they produce.
Lesson learning from the internship report

Working in a advertising agency as well as communication company, I am glad I am a part of this work among the crew. Become one of the inspiring people who stay behind the stage, trying to create something that many people in the country encounter in their daily life. Since I am always fond of learning how to be a creative person, I thought it would be nice to explore the agency world – a complete new-world which I have never experienced before.

As described in this report, my work as a copywriter is to write slogans, headlines, advertising copy, radio and TV scripts, web contents and more stuff as needed in both Bangla and English. These works involve in creating a short and precise sentence that can attract the audiences or the readers to consume or aware of the products.

After doing office for whole 3 months I came to know how to behave with our colleagues, with our seniors and also with our respected boss. And apart from the people in office I also learnt how to deal with customers and how to make them happy. And I am quite sure that all these stuffs are going to help me out in my future jobs and for all these I will be able to cope up with any situation and condition.
Conclusion

In present days advertisement can be seen or heard everywhere: in store windows, on the billboards, through the radio, on the television, the internet, in mailbox etc. Advertising helps customer to choose which product is best, or better than other product of the same kind. It also provides the customers information about their products, the cost, the version, the qualities, etc. Instead of going out to the machine where the products are made, people only have to stay at home, tune on the TV or radio or connect to the internet and take a look at the advertising channels or the websites of the producer. All those advertising materials are developed by the copywriters and the creative team.

After spending 3 months working in creative department as a copywriter, I get to learn a lot from this internship. The primary strengths or benefits that I could get from this internship is, first of all, I get to understand a lot about the working process in one advertisement agency. I understand how each department in agency processing. I get to meet a lot of expertise and talented people with interesting ideas.

After experience working in agency, I finally manage to succeed some of my goals which to be able to work in creative fields and get to have network with dynamic and creative people. Moreover, I am able to understand clearly of working environments, and hopefully these experiences would develop me to have a clear goal of the future career and in my profession after graduate. Besides, not only this internship helps me to have a sense of creating effective communication strategies, but also it provides me an opportunity to make a lot more friendship with the colleagues.

In the future, I hope my experience from this internship will be a guideline for me to become an effective communicator and a creative problem solver.
