

A Genius of the South and Harlem Renaissance: Moulding the Dynamics of American Literature

Nusmila Tabassum Lohani

Student ID: 10205001

Department of English and Humanities & Economics and Social Sciences

August 2015

BRAC University

Inspiring Excellence

Rahim
8/8/2015

BRAC University
Mohakhali, Dhaka.

A Genius of the South and Harlem Renaissance: Moulding the Dynamics of American Literature

A Thesis Submitted to
The Department of English and Humanities
Of BRAC University
By

Nusmila Tabassum Lohani
Student ID: 10205001

In Partial Fulfillment of the Requirements
For The Degree of
Bachelor of Arts in English
August 2015

Acknowledgement

The most significant contributor behind this work of research is Rukhsana Rahim Chowdhury, my respected supervisor. I am forever grateful to her and only have heart-felt gratitude for her, who has been exceptionally patient with my personal problems and always encouraged me to work harder to achieve greater authenticity and creative mastery.

Both of my parents are beacons of inspiration, it is to them I owe every pounce of will and drive to excel that they have so well ingrained in me. My sister, Nudrat Lohani Nabi is the most inspiring person in my life, my personal warrior who fights off all my anxiety and sadness whenever in need and from however far she is from me. I owe all my academic accomplishments in literature to her and my parents. Finally, I am grateful to my cousin, Syed Nuri Raiyan Reza, younger in age but most certainly wiser in thought; my rock, inspiration and above all his honesty and sometimes crude frankness are what made me aware and better prepared for the world.

I would also like to thank some of my most admired faculty members and professors, starting from Professors Firdous Azim, Mahruba T. Mowtushi, S. Nisha Alam, Suchi Karim and Mushira Habib- the people who encouraged me to pursue academic excellence through their teaching methods and in precious moments of advice and encouragement.