

noticeboard

Thursday, 18 October 2012

Young & Independent

BRACU Launches New Website

BRAC University's Ayesha Abed Library recently conducted a one-daylong workshop on "Using Open Source Content Management System Drupal to build Library Websites." A total of 26 library professionals from 14 public and private universities, and research institutes participated in the workshop. The Vice Chancellor of BRAC University, Professor Ainun Nishat, launched the BRACU Library website based on Drupal. The new website developed by BRACU Library reflects the library's futuristic vision and commitment to the growing needs of its users. Drupal is currently being used by numerous academic libraries in the world including Stanford, Toronto, Columbia, Cornell, Washington, Simon Fraser, Calgary and Minnesota University. The Vice Chancellor praised the initiatives taken by the BRAC University library. He mentioned that this new site will enhance the experience of library goers. After the launching he distributed certificates among the participants. Registrar of the University, Air Cdre (Retd), Ishfaq Ilahi Choudhury was also present at the ceremony.

Nahid Kaizar