Online short course conducted @ BRACU

BRAC Institute of Languages (BIL) of BRAC University conducted an online short course on 'ICT Integration into Education' for the faculty members of a prominent university in Kazakhstan named Kazakh Ablai Khan University of International Relations and World Languages on May 23, 2017, says a press release.

The closing session of the course took place at the university where the faculty members of BRAC University listened to the reflections of the participants from Kazakhstan on their learning.

The course consisted of seven sessions which covered the history and importance of information and communication technology, use of google docs in collaborative learning, use of blogs in education, Wikis and Wikipedia, use of podcasts and use of moodle.

Saulet Alpysbayeva, a participant and faculty member of Kazakh University, said, "This course was really effective as it taught practical knowledge with the help of theory. This assisted participants to enhance their skill by sharing the current experience and expertise."
