Message

It gives me much pleasure to congratulate the graduates on the successful completion of their studies at BRAC University. Each one of them has achieved an important milestone in life and will join a growing list of distinguished BRAC University Alumni.

I firmly believe that in a democratic nation education enables us all to achieve an effective state of affairs. The knowledge and skills that a good education system imparts allow us to navigate the terrain of an increasingly complex world and confront emerging challenges with greater confidence. I am sure that during their pursuit of knowledge, the graduates have made best use of all the resources and prepared themselves for the future with a view to bring about welfare for our people.

I urge the graduates to proceed in their journey with a vision that helps not only themselves but the country as a whole to which they belong. They should remember that they are the leaders of tomorrow and our country's future rests on their shoulders.

I wish the graduates the very best in the days ahead.

Message

I am pleased that BRAC University is celebrating its fourth Convocation successfully. I congratulate the graduates on this auspicious occasion.

It is pleasing to note that since the private university act was approved over a decade ago, some private institutions of Bangladesh have gained an international reputation and have produced graduates who can compete globally. It is important that access to higher education be financially viable and in this respect I am happy to know that BRAC University has made efforts in providing scholarship funds to meritorious and financially under-privileged students.

It remains for me to wish the new graduates success in life and to hope that they would carry on with the ideals imbued by their time spent in BRAC University.

Professor Nazrul Islam

Message from Chief Guest

It gives me great pleasure to learn that BRAC University is holding its 4th Convocation on February 5, 2009. This is indeed a festive occasion not only for the graduating students and their families but also for every member of BRAC University family.

The Convocation is a happy occasion through which students receive their rewards for sincere and dedicated work throughout their programme of studies. I believe that the graduating students, with the quality education they have received from this great institution are prepared to face the challenges of a dynamic and fast changing world. I hope the students will make significant contributions in their respective professions and add value to their future endeavours.

I congratulate the graduating students, their parents, the faculty and administrations of BRAC University on this grand occasion.

Professor A. F. Salahuddin Ahmed

A Brief Biography of Professor A. F. Salahuddin Ahmed

Professor A. F. Salahuddin Ahmed was born in 1924.

He received his education at the universities of Calcutta (MA), Pennsylvania (AM) and London (PhD). In his early youth he was drawn to the socialist movement and was involved in trade union activities. During the Hindu-Muslim communal riots of 1946-47, which resulted in massive killings and devastation, he left active politics and joined the Indian Red Cross Society and worked full time in the relief and rehabilitation program of the society.

After partition of British India and creation of Pakistan, Salahuddin Ahmed moved to Dhaka and started his new career as lecturer in History at the Dhaka Jagannath College in 1948. In subsequent years he served as Lecturer, Reader and Professor of History at Rajshahi University and later as Professor of History at Jahangirnagar and Dhaka Universities. He was UNESCO cultural fellow at Kyoto University (1956) and visiting lecturer in South Asian History at the Universities of Pennsylvania and Chicago, USA in 1963. After retirement from Dhaka University in 1984, Professor Ahmed continued to serve that university as supernumerary teacher until 1992. He was also associated with the Independent University of Bangladesh (IUB) for several years and co-edited 'Bangladesh: National Culture and Heritage' published by the same university. Dr. Ahmed is Fellow of the Bangla Academy and the Asiatic Society of Bangladesh. The Asiatic Society of Kolkata awarded him the Pandit Iswar Chandra Vidyasagar Lecturership "for his outstanding contribution in the field of humanities". He is also the recipient of the Ekushey Padak and Swadhinata Dibash Purashkar awarded by the Bangladesh government.

Professor Ahmed is the author of over a dozen books in both English and Bangla.

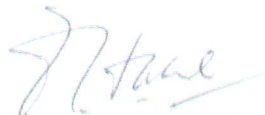

Message

First, let me offer my heartfelt congratulations to the graduates as we celebrate the Fourth Convocation of BRAC University. This is a proud moment for all of us as it represents the culmination of their hard work and achievement. It is not only our graduates that we celebrate today, but also their parents and the faculty and staff of the university who make this university the vibrant institution that it is.

In the course of just seven years, BRAC University has come a long way. It is recognized as one of the top private universities in the country, and it strives to offer courses and programs that are contemporary and relevant to the needs of the present day. At the same time, the broad-based education our students receive ensures that they learn to think critically and see things from multiple perspectives. We are also mindful of the critical needs of our society, and offer specialized postgraduate programs in Governance, Public Health, Development Studies, Business Administration, Biotechnology, Applied Economics, Disaster Management and English.

My advice to our graduates is to reflect on what you achieved so far, while also remembering that there is much more to learn. You have had the privilege of receiving an excellent education, but that also means you have the responsibility to use your education for the betterment of our society, to improve the lives of others who have not had the opportunities that you have had.

Congratulations once again, and warm wishes for the future.

Message

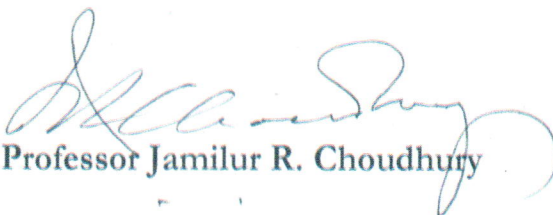

It gives me great pleasure to congratulate the fourth graduating class of BRAC University on this auspicious day.

BRAC University has moved ahead with tremendous strides in the last seven years, and our students and graduates are the proof of our progress. It is your hard work that we are celebrating today. Your parents and guardians also deserve special recognition for all they have done to make your education possible. And of course, the faculty and staff that form the backbone of this institution deserve praise for always striving to help students achieve their full potential.

We are all aware of the complex problems of the world today, and as future citizens of this country and of the world, it will be your responsibility to try to tackle some of these problems. We have endeavoured to provide you with an education that will give you the skills necessary to succeed in your chosen field. I am confident that the knowledge and training gained here will hold you in good stead in whatever career you decide to pursue.

I hope that all of you will succeed in following your dreams, and someday become leaders in your fields. But always try to continue learning from others, widening your knowledge, and gaining wisdom.

Once again, I congratulate you for your accomplishments, and I wish you the best as you set out into the world.

BRAC UNIVERSITY CONVOCATION

STATEMENT BY RAJAT K. GUPTA

It is a great pleasure to salute BRAC University on the occasion of this Convocation, and to applaud the achievements of its faculty, alumni and students.

Advanced education is preparing today's students to confront the challenges of building a stronger society at home and promoting development overseas. As we recognize the university's scholars for their academic distinction, we feel confident that they will make a strong contribution to a broader social mission: building a more prosperous, more harmonious international community.

Global issues require global-level thinking, and BRAC University is equipping its graduates with an awareness of the complex and interconnected issues that now confront mankind. As they pursue their careers in private enterprise, public service or nonprofit organizations, the graduates will assert the skills they developed here, to help their communities live up to their full potential for success.

On this day when we honor their academic success and renew our social commitment, allow me to add my congratulations to the graduates, faculty and leaders of BRAC University.

Highlights

Highlights of the Past Year

The past year has witnessed some significant developments at BRAC University. The student body continues to grow and the university continues to thrive. New academic programmes and departments have come into being and the features that make the BRACU experience unique have made it into a popular choice for increasing number of students. The following are some of the more notable highlights of the year gone by.

El-Pro becomes Cfl

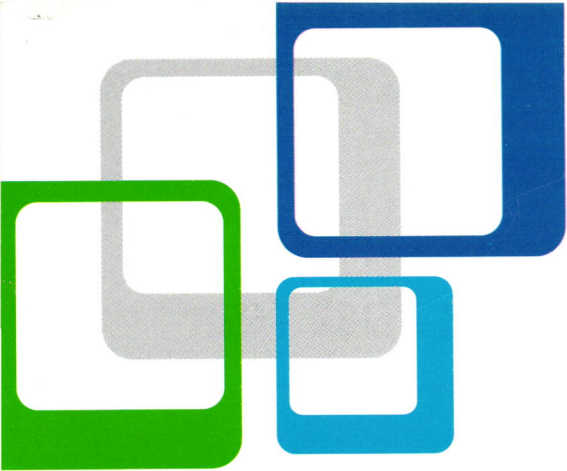

With a view to prioritizing a sophisticated and effective language teaching, the Centre for Languages (CfL) of BRAC University, previously known as the English Language Programme (El-Pro), was created in 2005. Since then, the uncomplicated goal of CfL has been to assist the students in developing the language skills that they need to be successful in graduate schools and their professional lives. To achieve this goal, CfL focuses on implementing student centered and creative language teaching techniques by developing modules based on students' proficiency level. This does not only eliminate the possibility of having mixed ability classes, but also ensure small classes with excellent interaction between teachers and learners. CfL believes in innovation; the main objectives of CfL faculty members are to inspire students to learn and enhance the skills they have.

As CfL perceives that learning does not take place in the classroom only, it has initiated and successfully arranged co and extra-curricular activities at the residential campus at Savar. These activities develop the students' creative abilities and assist in their language fluency. The main activities include yoga, photography, quiz, debate, creative writing and sports.

CfL is keen on bringing the creativity out of the students along with providing them authentic and real-life situations suitable to communicate in English. Further more, CfL also conducts seminars on social causes such as Drug Abuse, Nutrition Talk, Community Living and Skills required in the job markets.

Considering the global expansion of business and growing demand from BRAC University students and people from all walks of life, CfL has decided to offer courses in a number of foreign languages: Spanish, Chinese, Russian, Italian and French as well as Bangla.

Highlights

Highlights of the Past Year

CfL has also offered training to corporate houses from July 2007 after it had already started conducting classes on Communication Skills for BRAC Bank employees. Along with the classes, training on Professional Etiquette was also introduced for BRAC Bank managers. Other organizations which CfL offers the training courses/workshops to are: Aarong, Aktel and Huwaie, BRAC Bank Managers, Development Professional Programme (DevPro), Basic Communication and Teaching Methodologies for Monitors of PACE, Academic English Course for BUIED, The English Language course for Bank Executives, Medhabikash, Afghan Education Management Development Programme, IELTS, EPDC, Induction Training for Young Professionals Program YPP, Introduction to the Training Programme for RRC conducted by CfL BRAC University and BPS Teacher Training Programme.

BRAC Development Institute

The BRAC Development Institute is a new institute of the university which has replaced the Development Studies Programme (DSP). It is now responsible for offering the Master of Development Studies degree which was previously offered by DSP. It is also a centre for multi-disciplinary research encompassing all issues pertaining to development.

ECD Professional Degree Program, offered by BU-IED

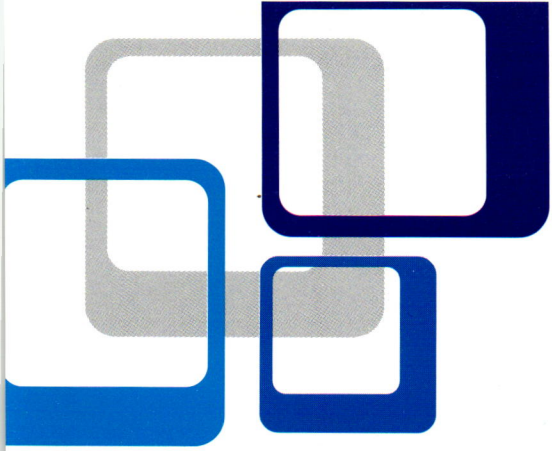

In January 2008 the BRAC University Institute for Educational Development (BU-IED) began offering a certificate course in the Early Childhood Development (ECD) professional development program. This program is a joint collaboration of BU-IED, Columbia University and the Open Society Institute in London. The programme comprises a postgraduate certificate course, postgraduate diploma and a Master of Social Science in ECD. This is the first ECD professional development programme ever offered in Bangladesh.

Applied Physics and Electronics at BU

Taking into account the natural synergy between the multifaceted areas of physics in general and electronics in particula, the Department of Mathematics and Natural Sciences sought and obtained approval to offer a Bachelor of Science degree in Applied Physics and Electronics in 2008. The degree, which commenced from the Spring semester of 2009, is the first degree of its kind offered by a private university in Bangladesh. It may be mentioned that BRAC University is also the only private university of the country to offer a Bachelor of Science degree in Physics.

Highlights

Highlights of the Past Year

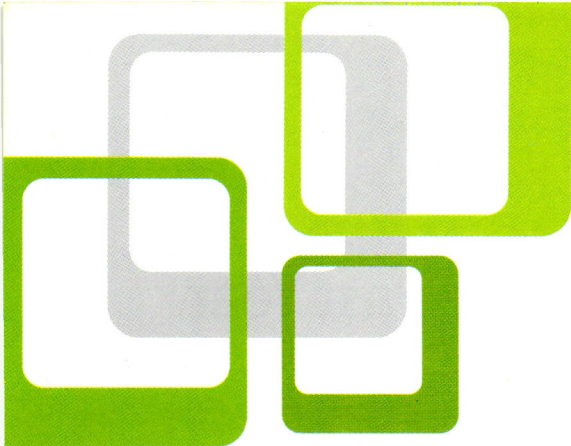

Inauguration of the IEEE Student Branch at BRAC University

In July 2008, a student branch of the Institute of Electrical and Electronic Engineers (IEEE) was inaugurated at BRAC University. This significant event amply demonstrates the commitment to excellence which the department of Computer Science and Engineering has shown since the inception of the university. The Department now has three student organisations with the other two being the BRAC University Computer Club (BUCC) and the BRAC University Electronics and communication Club. Soon after its inception, the IEEE student branch successfully hosted a seminar titled 'Prospects of WIMAX and 3G in Bangladesh: bringing in industry experts as guest speakers.

Center for Global Development Learning Network (GDLN) at BRAC University

BRAC University is the one and only affiliate of the Global Development Learning Network (GDLN) (<http://www.gdln.org>) in Bangladesh and has been operating since 2006. Coordinated by the World Bank from Washington DC, the GDLN is a partnership of over 120 recognised global institutions (affiliates) in over 80 countries that collaborate in the design of customised learning solutions for individuals and organisations working in development. Affiliates are as diverse as the Asian Institute of Management, the Ethiopian Civil Service College, the Islamic Development Bank and Pontificia Universidad Catolica of Peru. In 2008, BRAC University began operating a 40 person capacity Multipurpose Video Conference room on the 18th Floor of Aarong House for GDLN.

Department of Architecture

The Department of Architecture, that started its journey in Spring 2002 with 15 students and 3 enthusiastic faculty members, has evolved to have 200 students and 16 full-time well qualified faculty members in the last 7 years. The department offers a 199 credit undergraduate degree in Architecture and more than 35 students have already graduated through its 5 year program.

In order to maintain the quality of education, the department restricts the number of students to 20- 25 through a competitive admission process. It already has gained a reputation for providing high quality architectural education with the help of a group of faculty with strong academic and professional backgrounds. The design studios that are the most important part of the curriculum are taught by at least 2 teachers, thus ensuring excellent student teacher ratio. Highly qualified external faculty members who are renowned in their individual fields teach the host of courses related to architecture such as painting, photography, sculpture and music appreciation.

The academic environment at the department is enriched by its rich co-curricular activities and vibrant cultural life, amongst which are the Angan lecture series, ArchKids outreach program for children and the student cultural forum, 'Moitree'. The department also organizes 'Exhibitions' of the students' work and 'Design Charrettes' that develop interaction with other universities and encourage the students to excel. As part of course 'Practical Training', students are required to complete a semester of professional training in architectural offices and they do so not only in Bangladesh but also in India, Singapore, Hong Kong and Malaysia. The department has a student and staff exchange collaboration with the School of Architecture, University of Illinois at Chicago.

The department conducts research in different areas in collaboration with the Research and Evaluation Division of BRAC, British Council, etc. The undergraduate students are always encouraged to work on research projects that enable them to have exposure to the real world and at the same time, add to their experience. The department also provides several consulting services for various organizations. Prototype design of cyclone shelter for BRAC, interior design of University facilities and Post-disaster Housing in Noakhali for IUCN are the current works of the department.

Postgraduate Programs in Disaster Management

BRAC University is one of the very few academic institutions around the world and perhaps the first in the region to offer formal academic programs in disaster management. The Postgraduate Programs in Disaster Management (PPDM) was started in Fall 2005 with a view to creating qualified professionals in this nationally and internationally significant field. This is a modular program (certificate, diploma and master's degree) with a progressively higher level of academic aptitude. Since the beginning of the programs 10 students have already been awarded Master in Disaster Management degree and another 20 are likely to be added to the list by early 2009. By this time the total number of Postgraduate Certificate in Disaster Management awardees will be more than 25. The participants in the certificate program are mostly government and NGO officials involved in disaster management related activities while students pursuing Master degrees comprise government/non-government officials and fresh graduates as well. Graduates from PPDM are well-placed mostly in various national and international development organizations where, in many instances, they secured their placements before their graduation.

Beside the academic programs, PPDM is working to build a resource center within itself where disaster related books/documents and services would be made available. So far PPDM has provided research and consultancy services to organizations such as IUCN and BRAC. These services include: improved design and construction of rural houses (IUCN); design of cyclone shelters (BRAC); design of stronger houses in cyclone affected areas (BRAC) etc.

Presently PPDM has collaboration with ADPC, Thailand, Northumbria University in the UK, Kathmandu University, Nepal and Kyoto University, Japan.

Postgraduate Programs in Disaster Management have been supported by OXFAM-GB and the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA).

BRAC BUSINESS SCHOOL

Our journey over the last eight years from when we were born, a Department in 2001 transformed into a school in 2006, has been a very satisfying experience. We grew as we developed, we grew as our goals got stretched and we grew as our stakeholders became increasingly demanding. These have been our formative years as we blossomed out of a cocoon into an entity, an entity that rightfully claims a front desk alongside the competitors.

This year we shall be graduating over 400 students in different areas of specialization of our core programs i.e BBA and MBA. We now enter the market in a visible manner as our total input into the job market almost touches the thousand mark. These are our alumni, our stake in the future of the school and the nation at large. But it is not the number alone, but quality alongside that makes us distinct. Judging by our interaction with the market, employers in the main, we feel satisfied at having a job done well. Our graduates do connect.

Our vision is a place alongside the respected business schools in the region to be stretched to the continent. This is also our promise to our stakeholders, students both past, present and future. This requires planning, preparation and steadfast determination, all of which we take seriously. As we inch towards this goal through building the new, discarding the old and improving the existing we have made many contacts within the country and abroad that enhances the depth and spread of our program. We have gone cross-cultural as our students have the option to complete part of their course requirements in universities abroad and vice-versa. Faculty exchange is gathering momentum and our students have started winning competitions within the country and abroad, the last being the Battle of Minds 2008.

Though our MBA program is fairly new we feel its format needs some changes as per the dynamics of the market i.e more BBA graduates, from Brac University and other universities, joining the MBA program. To keep up with this change we shall be launching the EMBA program in the summer, while making necessary changes in the existing MBA and BBA curriculum. Both the BBA and MBA curriculum and their mode of operation have been thoroughly revised.

As we say goodbye to our new alumni, wishing them all the very best, we also promise them a school that they will find more responsive to their future needs through the newly created BBA Forum and the MBA Forum, our conduits to the larger alumni. Keep up the good work and stay connected.

Department of Computer Science and Engineering

The Department of Computer Science and Engineering embodies BRAC University's tradition of excellence as a leader in engineering education and research. Our undergraduate program prepares students to be industry and academic leaders who can apply engineering principles across a wide range of disciplines. The department offers undergraduate degrees in Computer Science (CS), Computer Science and Engineering (CSE) and Electronic and Communication Engineering (ECE). The department also has a continuing education program under which evening courses on CISCO certification and others are offered.

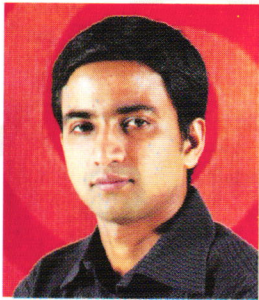

The department encourages undergraduate students to work on research projects that would lead to academic publications. It has a thriving research community with more than 50 national and international academic publications by undergraduate students. The Center for Research on Bangla Language Processing (CRBLP) run by the faculty of this department is currently conducting research that deals with Natural Language Processing focusing on Bangla. The topics of research include Bangla Document authoring, Information Retrieval (Spelling checker, Search Engine), Optical Character Recognition, Pronunciation Generator, Speech Processing, Morphological Analysis, Parts of Speech Tagging, Syntax, Grammar Checker, Text Categorization, Language Modeling and many more interesting research areas. Research partners of the department include International Development Research Center (IDRC), Microsoft Corporation, D-Net, Bangladesh Computer Council, UNDP and others.

The department boasts a dynamic student community with three student organizations: BRAC University Computer Club (BUCC), BRAC University Electronics and Communication Club (BUECC) and BRAC University IEEE Student Branch. Guided by faculty members, the students of these clubs organize workshops on different topics, telecommunication and IT quiz contests, Olympiads, programming contests, club fairs, science fairs, industrial tours and many other exciting events.

Department of English and Humanities

The Department of English and Humanities offers a Bachelor and a Master of Arts in English. The BA programme offers three concentrations: Literature, Linguistics & ELT, and Media & Cultural Studies. The Literature concentration introduces students to a wide variety of English writing from different historical periods and regions, providing a strong critical and theoretical basis, and encouraging them to explore the relationship of literary works to their historical and cultural contexts. The Linguistics and ELT concentration offers a balanced curriculum of theory and practice, and equips students with the skills required for English language teaching. The Media and Cultural Studies concentration, which is interdisciplinary in nature, gives students a good foundation in the history of ideas and cultural theory, enabling them to interpret ever-changing cultural traditions and gain insight into their own experience. In the final year, all students have to write a dissertation under the supervision of a faculty member, or do an internship related to their major concentration. Dissertation topics and internship placements are decided by the department in consultation with the students. The dissertation helps students hone their academic writing and research skills, making the transition to an MA programme easier, while the internship offers hands-on training, a rare opportunity to bridge the gap between theory and practice before plunging into the job market.

The MA programme offers two concentrations: Literature, and Applied Linguistics & ELT. Students can also take a combination of the two. The Literature concentration brings students up to date with feminist, post-colonial, and post-modern approaches to literature and prepares them for participation in the burgeoning cultural industry. The Applied Linguistics & ELT concentration prepares students for a career in language teaching through a solid grounding in linguistics, various approaches to language teaching and hands-on teacher training.

The curriculum as a whole puts special emphasis on writing courses to develop students' writing skills. To support the department's rigorous academic programme and achieve the level of writing required for the undergraduate dissertation, the department has a Writing Lab staffed by faculty and students from the department so that students can receive individualized peer tutoring for their written work.

Apart from organizing workshops, seminars and talks by eminent scholars, writers and practitioners from various fields, the department fosters creativity in students by giving them opportunities to take part in plays, creative writing workshops, international exchange programs, etc. After graduation, the analytical and critical thinking skills gained at the department enable them to adapt to a wide variety of job situations. Our graduates are currently working in fields ranging from advertising and media to teaching, research, and journalism.

Department of Economics and Social Sciences

During the past year the Department of Economics and Social Sciences (ESS) has grown and established itself as one of the principal departments of BRAC University. It has gained a reputation for being selective in its intake, exacting in its standards and careful regarding matters of pedagogy. This is reflected by the increasing number of students who are choosing to major in economics and the qualities embodied in the graduates who have already passed out from the Department. Seven out of approximately 30 such graduates, who hold the degree of BSS in Economics, have secured admission and funding to highly regarded postgraduate programmes in economics and other social sciences in Europe and North America – a remarkably high percentage for a fledgling department. In addition, the minor in Sociology offered by ESS is proving to be very popular with students of other majors.

It is a matter of great satisfaction that the first graduates of the Department's Master of Science in Applied Economics programme, which began in Fall 2007, will be passing-out in this convocation. It is hoped that this new programme will grow and consolidate itself over the coming years.

Despite the increase in student numbers, the close interaction between students and faculty, which is a hallmark of ESS, has not diminished. Faculty and students of the Department are amongst the most active when it comes to leadership of and participation in extracurricular affairs such as club and forum activity. As well as the BRAC University Economics Club, other clubs such as the Global Affairs Forum, Rural Development Club, AISEC, Oikos and the Art Society are led by ESS students or advised by ESS faculty. Special mention must be made of a new club, "Monon", established through the efforts of the Department, which aims to highlight and address issues related to the mental health and wellbeing not only of the BRAC University community but of greater society at large. In a short span of time this club, through its activities, has managed to raise awareness of an important but rarely discussed issue.

Alongside its core function of teaching, the Department has continued to maintain a full schedule of talks and seminars to disseminate knowledge and actively encourages its faculty to conduct research.

The Department shall strive to uphold its strengths, enhance its reputation and continue to provide a balanced and rewarding experience for its students and all those who engage with it.

Department of Mathematics and Natural Sciences

The Department of Mathematics and Natural Sciences (MNS) at BRAC University envisages providing quality education in basic and applied sciences and mathematics. Science with its multifarious aspects plays a pivotal role in the development and progress of modern technology, be it in the realms of physical sciences, biosciences, medicine, social sciences, engineering, agriculture, business, commerce or management.

The MNS Department offers courses in physical and biosciences, mathematics, statistics, economic geography and environmental sciences. It started the undergraduate programme for the degree of Bachelor of Science in Physics from Fall 2005 Semester. The Department also started the MS Biotech programme in the Spring 2007 Semester. The undergraduate programme in Applied Physics and Electronics will be started from Spring 2009 Semester. The Mathematics and Natural Sciences Department will be introducing undergraduate programmes in Mathematics, Biotechnology, Pharmacy, Microbiology and Biochemistry in the near future. It also envisages starting M Phil and MS programmes in Physics.

The first batch of students of MS Biotech programme will get degrees in the ensuing BRACU Convocation to be held in February 2009.

BRAC

Development Institute

BRAC Development Institute (BDI), housed at BRAC University, seeks to promote research and build knowledge on practical solutions for problems of the poor in the global South. It takes as its starting point the hugely successful and massively scaled up development interventions of BRAC, Grameen, Gonoshasthaya Kendra and many others—in immunization, oral rehydration therapy, family planning, health awareness, non-formal primary schooling, microfinance, etc. BDI intends to build knowledge around such exciting initiatives in the South, focus on developing new ideas and new strategies, pilot test such ideas and provide important lessons on good practices for practitioners, policy makers and funders. More specifically BDI will serve as a resource center for issues on poverty and the poor. Its core functions will include:

creating knowledge: highlighting the innovative development experiences in the South and ensuring visibility and voice in the global development discourse convening experts: providing a space for practitioners, academics and policy makers to come together to focus on specific problems of the poor and develop new strategies and new pathways incubating ideas: field testing specific ideas through pilots, conducting qualitative and rigorous quantitative studies to understand process and impacts, and distilling good practice lessons for adaptation and scaling up advocating policy: working with policy makers to adopt pro-poor development strategies

ACTIVITIES

BRAC Development Institute has set an ambitious workplan and taken on the following activities:

Economic Transformations:

- > determining how best to create a ladder for the poorest to graduate out of extreme poverty through linking safety nets and financial services
- > analyzing value chains and conducting sub-sector analysis to determine how to effectively use the government, the private sector and NGOs to create markets for the poor
- > identifying new methodologies to extend the frontiers of financial access for the poor

Democratic Governance:

- > determining how best to create and implement mechanisms of citizen engagement in local government so that poor people can exercise control over local institutions and governmental resources
- > finding methods to extend access to justice for the poor

Women's Empowerment:

- > understanding the pathways of women's empowerment, building constituencies for justice and equality, and describing the changing narratives of sexuality

Academic Programs:

- > master's in development studies
- > certificate courses
- > winter school
- > internship programs

SYEDA RAFAT SULTANA

THE SCHOOL OF LAW

To the Romans, Justice was a goddess whose symbols were a throne that tempests could not shake, a pulse that passion could not stir, eyes that were blind to any feeling of favor or ill will, and the sword that fell on all offenders with equal certainty and with impartial strength. Now, Justice - in the name of Rule of Law is a sine-qua-non for the maintenance of peace and tranquility in a given polity. In a society advancing rapidly, it is the law that gives the lead to society and places before it ideals and values to which people should conform. Recognizing BRAC's background, BRACU's commitment and goal, the School of Law, BRAC University, strives to impart an education to seek legal solutions that respect social, cultural and aesthetic needs of the people and prepare tomorrow's lawyers to meet the challenges of the new millennium and the realities of globalisation.

The undergraduate law programme at BRAC University School of Law is a four-year undergraduate programme for individuals who plan a career in the legal profession and other allied fields and offers the bachelor of laws [LL.B. Honours] degree. Although the primary emphasis of the programme is on law and the legal profession, it would also prepare persons who might be planning a career in the government, judicial service, business, NGOs and social sectors dealing with law and legal activities. In short, the objective of the programme is to equip individuals to develop the specific skill, legal acumen and the breadth of judgement required to be successful professionals.

The School of Law began its academic journey in the Spring of 2004 and in the Spring of 2009, its first batch of graduates take their place on the Convocation stage to receive their LL.B.(Honours) degree. For them, it has been a long, but rewarding journey and this is, indeed, a proud moment for the faculty and the students of the School.

Institute of Governance Studies

The Institute of Governance Studies started its mission in September 2005 under the umbrella of BRAC University with a view to recognize and endorse effective, transparent, accountable, equitable, and citizen-friendly governance in Bangladesh and in South Asia. Since its inception, the Institute has been a pioneer in disseminating quality education, research and training in the field of governance and development. It offers a post-graduate degree and professional training and undertakes extensive and invaluable research in the concerned field.

The Institute has set itself apart from others in that it has a highly capable and experienced group of faculty members comprised of professors from renowned local and foreign institutes such as Harvard, Monash, the National University of Singapore, University of Ulster (UK) and the University of Alabama. IGS promotes participatory methods of learning through case studies, field visits and interaction with experts and practitioners. IGS also utilizes the expertise of its international instructors by making use of distance learning through video conferencing. Till now, the Institute has housed three Fulbright scholars who have worked on developing capacity for research and training curriculum in Bangladesh.

The Masters in Governance and Development (MAGD) program, a residential program exclusively for civil servants of Bangladesh, has been designed in consultation with the Ash Institute of Democratic Governance and Innovation of the Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University, Lee Kuan Yew School of Public Policy at the National University of Singapore, Monash University in Australia and the University Of Malaya in Malaysia. The objective of the MAGD is to enhance the knowledge and skills of individuals so that they can rise above their narrow environment and are equipped to confront the complexities of development in the context of their society against the backdrop of an increased globalisation.

An important facet of the Institute's core mission is to conduct research on governance and disseminate the findings to the public. Since 2006, the Institute publishes annual State of Governance in Bangladesh reports, policy papers, and studies of public institutions. The focus of Institute is applied research and policy analysis. The public policy research is designed to enhance the knowledge on governance and to constructively engage the government and the public stakeholders in the institutional reform process. In addition to research responsibilities, the research team emphasizes building capacity of young Bangladeshi scholars who have opportunities to work independently and with senior local and international faculty and to publish.

The Institute also provides technical support to various Government projects. Recently the Institute drafted the National Integrity Strategy and the conducted the Bangladesh Gap Analysis and Compliance Review of the United Nations Convention Against Corruption.

The programs offered by the Institute aim to improve academic qualification and build a better constituency among the future leaders of the nation. Huge efforts are being made to ensure that participants think analytically and apply their knowledge in practice.

School of Public Health

The James P Grant School of Public Health (JPG-SPH) began its journey in 2005 with the explicit mission of training future public health leaders and managers who would be dedicated to improve health outcomes of populations in disadvantaged areas of the world, with particular focus on the poor and women, through the application of the art and science of public health. The JPG School of Public Health has a unique community-oriented, multidisciplinary, experiential approach to learning that emphasizes critical, innovative, problem-solving thinking rooted in rigorous research and best practices. The School currently has three distinct but complementary programs: a Masters in Public Health (MPH) Program that is truly international in character bringing together students from Europe, North America, Africa, Asia and Latin America, along with those from Bangladesh; a Continuing Education Program (CEP) that offers a number of short courses throughout the year geared towards capacity building of health professionals, managers and practitioners from the public and private sectors; and a robust research portfolio supported by funding from various donors (for example, USAID, DfID, CIDA, European Union, GTZ), UN agencies (e.g., WHO, UNAIDS, UNFPA) and multilateral organizations (for example, the World Bank, Save the Children USA, GFATM/Global Fund to fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria).

Since its commencement in 2005, the MPH Program has graduated 77 students from 14 different countries including Afghanistan, India, Nepal, Pakistan, Philippines, Myanmar, Sri Lanka, Ethiopia, Uganda, Tanzania, Kenya, as well as Canada and the United States. The fourth batch of MPH students graduating in December 2008 consists of 18 students from Bangladesh and 12 others representing 11 countries from Asia, Africa, Europe and North America. The World Health Organization, in its December 2007 Bulletin, recognized the School as one of the best in the world in promoting and practicing innovative higher public health education.

The research projects of the School are largely grouped within three overarching centers: the Centre for Qualitative Inquiry (CQI), the Centre for Health Systems Studies (CHSS) and the Centre for Gender, Sexuality and HIV/AIDS – a UNAIDS collaborative centre. The short courses currently offered by the Continuing Education Program include Health Systems Research and Development, Health Equity, Qualitative Research Methods, Health Economics and Health Care Financing, and Quality Management in Health Care. The CEP will soon launch a major 10-week capacity building short course for public sector health professionals leading to an Executive Certificate in Public Health Management.

The JPG-SPH is the product of a strong collaboration between BRAC University and the International Centre for Diarrheal Disease Research, Bangladesh (ICDDR,B), one of the most highly acclaimed international research organizations based in Dhaka. The School also developed strong partnerships with a number of highly acclaimed educational institutions from the West including Harvard University, George Washington University, Columbia University, New York, and Johns Hopkins University from the United States; the University of Ottawa in Canada; the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine and the Institute for Development Studies, University of Sussex in the United Kingdom; the Karolinska Institute in Sweden; the University of Amsterdam in the Netherlands; and Heidelberg University in Germany. Apart from its full-time faculty, the School immensely benefits from strong support from these internationally recognized institutes of higher learning in terms of adjunct faculty and research expertise. Highly trained Senior Scientists from ICDDR,B are actively involved in all activities of the School – teaching, research, and thesis supervision. Being an integral part of BRAC – the world's largest NGO – and having access to the diverse community-based health and development programs of BRAC is the source of great strength for the School.
