

NEWAGE

BRACU joins global network to transform education

Staff Correspondent | Published: 01:07, Jan 27,2020

BRAC University vice-chancellor Vincent Chang gives a presentation on the campus recently. — Press release

BRAC University is partnering with the Open Society University Network with the aim of preparing students for current and future global challenges.

The Open Society University Network has been formed to integrate teaching and research across higher education institutions worldwide. It would offer network courses and joint degree programmes, said a release.

The university network's core would be formed by Central European University and Bard College. Its other partners include Arizona State University, and the American University of Central Asia in Kyrgyzstan.