The Launching Ceremony and Workshop on Using Open Source Content Management System Drupal to build Library Websites at BRAC University Library

BRAC University Ayesha Abed Library conducted a one-day workshop on Using Open Source Content Management System Drupal to build Library Websites on 7th October 2012. A total of 24 library professionals from 14 public and private universities, and research institutes participated in the workshop. The Vice Chancellor of BRAC University Professor Ainun Nishat launched the BRACU Library website based on Drupal (<http://library.bracu.ac.bd>). The new website developed by BRACU Library reflects the library's forward-thinking vision and commitment to the growing needs of its users. Drupal is currently being used by numerous academic libraries in the world including Stanford, Toronto, Columbia, Cornell, Washington, Simon Fraser, Calgary and Minnesota University.

The Chief Guest of the Launching Ceremony, Vice Chancellor, BRAC University praised the initiatives taken by the BRAC University library. He mentioned that this new site will greatly improve the experience of the library users.

Professor Ainun Nishat (Vice Chancellor) distributed certificates among the participants attended the workshop.
